ABOUT ME

I have always been passionate about computers, from the way they're made to how we can make use of their capabilities to develop applications which make our lives more interesting as human's and free us from some of our chores.

So, after finishing high school in Scientific and Human studies in 2016, I started my college degree in Computer Engineering at the Instituto Politécnico de Castelo Branco, the same year.

For the past 2 years I have been working professionally as an Outsystems Developer, fully remote, but have been working in projects with Outsystems since 2021. Working in Outsystems was an excellent stepping stone into my professional career. It allowed me to develop meaningful applications with real world use and improve my communication skills, which sometimes become the biggest part of my working day.

Currently been highly motivated to learn Python and to work with machine learning and deep learning. It was always the area that caught my attention the most, so right now I'm spending most of my free time improving my knowledge in these areas, hoping that, in the near future, I'll be working in this sector.
